WOMEN

is a unique publishing event of our century. In it, a man has written, fully, in detail and without shame, of his sexual experience. He has sought pleasure with women regardless of social convention or moral prohibition. He has known women from America, from Europe and from the Orient. Each woman's sexual behavior revealed to the author her individuality and personal preferences. Yet each woman's behavior also reflected accurately the comparisons and contrasts in sexual attitudes and customs throughout the world. As R. E. L. Masters writes in his Introduction, "Better than most novelists, and better than most authors of psychological case studies, John Philip Lundin has presented a slice of the sexual life of our time."
