Monomey is a small American coastal town... smug, calm, peaceful, and ripe for disaster. As Monomey's inhabitants go about their daily business and nightly intrigues, disaster is gathering insidiously as the waves that break on her sandy beach...

For Monomey is confronted with annihilation as a tornado heads straight for her: for ten dreadful and revealing days her fate hangs in the balance... fear, hope, strength and weakness are ruthlessly laid bare. Jim Carpenter is afraid the town will learn he enjoys standing his wife in the nude; John Remington, a coastguard with a brave exterior, is afraid of sexual involvement; Frank Darato, the police chief is afraid to acknowledge the fact that his son is a vicious hoodlum; Joann, the girl who was always available, Lynn, the subversive schoolteacher, and Mrs. Handforth - all their secrets and fears can no longer be hidden.

Can the townspeople survive the threat from nature? Do they deserve to? This is the theme of John Master's great new novel, written in the vigorous style of his world famous books set in India. Trial at Monomey is a new venture for this top-selling author and has been widely acclaimed by the critics.
