"Almost 2000 years ago, there took place an extraordinary flowering of literature in Tamilnadu, the Southern most part of India. Strangely, this literature which includes what I believe is the finest poetry ever written has been neglected, and even in India, where it arose." - Prof. George Hart

In 'Tamil Sangam Poetry, Love Lyrics' we have some elegant poems.... translated into simple English.

They speak about the ecstasy of being in love, confiding in one's friend, being opposed by the parents and eventually getting married and living in contentment. Some express the jealousy of the devout wife, the enchanting ways of the courtesan and the desperate position of the husband caught between the two.

The arena is sweeping and the handling captivating.

These poems are a perfect reflection of the life style of a warm hearted and brave race that lived centuries ago. Fortunately, these exquisite lines, that were originally scratched upon seasoned palm leaves, have withstood the ravages of time and are still on our hands.
