TRIALS OF INDEPENDENCE

(1858-1946)

B. R. Agarwala

NATIONAL BOOK TRUST, INDIA

This volume, of interest to both lawyers and laymen, covers some of the important trials that took place during British rule. Beginning with the trial of Bahadur Shah Zafar, the last Mughal ruler, the book concludes with the trial of Sheikh Abdullah, who rebelled not against the British but against the monarchical rule. The trials depict the characters of each of the accused in a vivid manner, for instance, while Bahadur Shah Zafar appears a weak, senile and vacillating man unable to put up any defence, M. N. Roy, the firebrand revolutionary, stands out in his eagerness to propagate his views on the country's freedom than to secure acquittal.

B. R. Agarwala (b. in 1926 in Rajasthan), after post-graduating in history and sociology, took to study of law and topped the Bombay University, in 1955, winning the coveted Sir Jai-shankar Kanga Golden Jubilee Memorial Prize. In 1958, he was called to the Bar (Lincoln's Inn) and soon started his practice at the Bombay High Court. In 1959, he enrolled as an advocate at the Supreme Court of India where he is now practising as a senior partner of a leading firm of solicitors.

Apart from writing books on Law Relating to Entry into and Exit from India, The Practice and Procedure of the Supreme Court of India, Shah Bano Case, etc., he has written a number of articles on law, sociology and literature. He is the founder-editor of the Sociological Bulletin and has founded the Indian Sociological Society and the Indian School of Synthetic Jurisprudence. As an ardent lover of books, he owns a vast collection of books in art, literature, philosophy, sociology, psychology and sociology.
