

Pan Books

The Aristos
The personal philosophy of
John Fowles

Author of

The French Lieutenant's Woman

The Magus

The Collector

CONTENTS

Preface to a New Edition	7
Introduction	15
1 The Universal Situation	17
2 Human Dissatisfactions	32
3 The Nemo	49
4 Relativity of Recompense	61
5 Doing the Good	69
6 The Tensional Nature of Human Reality	85
7 Other Philosophies	104
8 The Obsession with Money	125
9 A New Education	141
10 The Importance of Art	183
11 The Aristos in the Individual	211
Appendix: Heraclitus	214
Notes	218

'A brave attempt to look at the world and to decide what an intelligent man should think about it' SUNDAY TIMES

John Fowles' very personal ideas and theories cover the whole range of human experience: good and evil, pleasure and pain, sex and socialism, Christianity and star-gazing.

This controversial and fascinating contribution to the philosophy of our time is

'A refreshing and disturbing book' LOS ANGELES TIMES

'His honesty makes him piquantly unpredictable ... he is simultaneously original, profound and scintillating'

BIRMINGHAM POST

'His mentor is ancient Greek philosopher Heraclitus, who also wrote of aristos (the excellent in life), and Fowles shares his love of paradox, his clear-eyed contemplation and, particularly, his eloquence' THE ECONOMIST

You must also read:

THE COLLECTOR 'Horribly brilliant' Anthony Standish

THE MAGUS 'A phenomenal piece of story-telling' John Banville

U.K.	(6/-)	30p
AUSTRALIA		95c
NEW ZEALAND		95c
SOUTH AFRICA		75c
CANADA		$1.25